Custom Application Development

Many successful companies concentrate on what they are good at, which is running their business in a highly competitive environment, innovating in terms of people, processes and products/services, while partnering with experts for their systems and application development needs. New Gateway Softwares has successfully partnered with multiple clients in multiple industries for their custom software development.

Custom software development is our speciality, having the distinct pedigree in building, supporting and integrating enterprise class software products for more than two decades. We take the time to get to know not only your specific business situation, but also your company and your industry. This allows us to suggest just the right tools, technologies, and frameworks to accomplish your goals. Through our years of software development, we have been able to develop and enhance frameworks and tools, which help accelerate our software development and testing. In cases where our clients have a preference for specific tools, components or packages, we are more than happy and able to accommodate those specifics.

We are very flexible in terms of our entry point and participation in the application life cycle. In some cases, we have started from scratch on a clean slate. In some other cases, our clients have a running application, which needs enhancement. Our custom software experience encompasses multiple industries, business processes and systems/tools/technologies. We are able to work across and seamlessly interconnect multiple technology generations such as mainframes, host based systems, client server systems, web based multi-tier systems, cloud based systems and mobile platforms.
